Anaheim Folk Music Concert Series #137

An evening of Western music in Anaheim tonight!

Joyce Woodson with special guest Ray Doyle

( www.joycewoodson.com ) Joyce Woodson's crystal clear voice, mellifluous guitar playing and her own style of "New-Old Western Music" has been recognized in many ways including Best Song of the Year Award from the Western Music Association for her title cut "If I Hadn't Seen the West," Will Rogers Cowboy Award for Best Female Performer for 2008, and winner of the 22nd Tucson Folk Festival Songwriting Contest. As the stories in her songs unfold, bringing characters to life as if they're hunkered down at the campfire next to you, the listener understands that the recognition is well deserved. Living in San Juan Capistrano near where she grew up, this Orange County original makes her return to The Living Tradition stage.

( www.raydoyle.net ) Singer/songwriter/guitarist Ray Doyle is a longtime member of the popular cowboy and Western band Wylie & the Wild West. He has performed on five continents at venues ranging from the Grand Ole Opry and the Kennedy and Lincoln Centers to folk festivals, cowboy poetry gatherings, French rodeos and Australian wool sheds. Born in Dublin, Ireland, Ray emigrated with his family to Canada, and eventually settled near Hollywood, California. His newly released second solo CD, "The Emigrant Trail", celebrates Ray's Irish heritage, Western music influences and first-hand emigrant experience.
